ABOUT THE US DRY BEAN COUNCIL (USDBC)

The USDBC is a trade association comprised of leaders in the bean industry with the common goal of educating US consumers about the benefits of beans. The USDBC gives a voice to the bean industry and provides information to consumers, health professionals, educators and the media about the good taste, nutritional value and versatility of beans.

The USDBC also is a resource for information on US exporters, overseas importers, US dry bean classes, trade policy issues and the role of US-grown beans in international food-aid efforts. USDBC also publishes foreign language newsletters and other publications designed to help local importers, packagers and canners better understand and maintain contact with the US dry bean exporting trade.

As part of USDBC'S mission, we collaborate with public health organizations, research centers, universities, and the entire supply chain from seed suppliers to farmers, processors, wholesalers, distributors and transporters. We supply beans to public and private hunger feeding programs.

The USDBC has representatives around the world who facilitate activities and dialog between the US and overseas trade.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN REGION

Since 1916, bean producers and shippers in Arizona, Colorado, Kansas, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, Texas, Utah and Wyoming have promoted the high quality of their bean production through the Rocky Mountain Bean Dealers Association. Comprising the largest production region in the United States for Pinto and Great Northern Beans, the RMBDA participates in a quality grading system which meets or exceeds the US government standards. Bean producers in the states of Colorado and Nebraska have joined together to promote their beans and to invest in research to improve the quality and cost efficiency of their production.

MAJOR US DRY BEAN CLASSES

ADZUKI

These are small, reddish brown beans with a nutty, sweet flavor. Adzuki beans are often used in Asian cuisines. They are particularly popular in Japanese cooking where they're used in confections.

BABY LIMA

Flat-shaped, creamy white-colored beans with a rich, buttery flavor. Baby lima beans are excellent in soups, stews and casseroles or just cooked with herbs and spices.

BLACK BEAN

Black beans are small ovals with deep black skins. They have cream colored flesh with a mild, sweet, earthy taste and a soft texture. Sometimes called turtle beans, these beans are used in classic Latin American, Caribbean and Southwestern United States soups, stews and sauces.

BLACKEYE BEAN

Blackeye beans are characterized by their kidney shaped, white skin with a small black eye and very fine wrinkles. They have a scented aroma, creamy texture and distinctive flavor. Originally from Africa, blackeye beans are also known as cowpeas and black-eyed peas and have rapid cooking potential, with no pre-soaking needed.

CRANBERRY BEAN

Cranberry beans are small rounded beans known for their creamy texture with a subtle, nut-like flavor. They are ivory in color with red markings that disappear on cooking. These beans are a favorite in northern Italian, Spanish and Portuguese cuisines.

DARK RED KIDNEY BEAN

Large, kidney-shaped bean with a deep reddish-brown color. They have a robust, full-bodied flavor and soft texture. Dark red kidney beans are most often used in chili and are also popular in salads and with rice.

GARBANZO BEAN

Garbanzo beans or chickpeas are usually beige to pale yellow in color with a nutlike taste and buttery texture. The garbanzo bean is especially popular in many Middle Eastern and Indian dishes such as hummus, falafels and curries.

GREAT NORTHERN BEAN

Great Northerns are flat, kidney-shaped medium-sized white beans with a delicate flavor. Great Northern beans take on the flavors of the foods with which they are cooked which is why they are popular in France for making cassoulet (a white bean casserole). In the United States they are traditionally prepared as Boston baked beans.

LARGE LIMA BEAN

Sometimes called “butter beans”; large lima beans are flat-shaped, ivory-colored beans with a smooth creamy sweet flavor. Used in a popular American side dish called succotash, large limas make a good substitute for potatoes or rice and are excellent in soups and casseroles

PINTO BEAN

Medium-sized, oval-shaped bean with a mottled beige and brown skin, an earthy flavor and a powdery texture. Closely related to red kidney beans. When cooked, pintos lose their mottling and turn brown. Most often used in refried beans, and are great for Tex-Mex and Mexican bean dishes.

LIGHT RED KIDNEY BEAN

Large, kidney-shaped bean with a robust, full-bodied flavor and soft texture. Popular in the Caribbean region as well as Portugal and Spain, the light red kidney beans are most often used in chili, salads and paired with rice.

SMALL RED BEAN

Dark red color with flavor and properties similar to red kidney, only smaller in size. Also called Mexican red bean, they hold both shape and firmness when cooked. Most often used in soups, salads, chili and Creole dishes.

NAVY BEAN

Small white ovals with a mild flavor and powdery texture. Also known as pea beans. Most often used in pork and beans, or baked beans, also used in soups and stews, and are great pureed.

PINK BEAN

Small, pale, pink-colored beans with a rich, meaty flavor and a slightly powdery texture. Related to the kidney bean, pink beans turn reddish brown when cooked. Pink beans are often used in chili and are a favorite in Old West recipes.

NUTRITIONAL VALUE

Beans are an excellent source of vegetable protein and minerals such as iron, magnesium and zinc. They are rich in folic acid, an element associated with the reduction of such birth defects as Spina Bifida and also protect against heart disease. Beans are also a good source of non-lactic calcium. They are rich in soluble dietary fibre which helps to bring down cholesterol levels and also contain estrogens of vegetable origin which contribute towards reducing certain cancers caused by hormonal action.

ABOUT THE US DRY BEAN INDUSTRY

New York was the birthplace of the United States commercial, dry edible bean industry in the mid-1800s. Michigan took the lead in the early 1900s, becoming the world's leading producer of navy beans primarily for canners in the UK, US and Australia. Strong, steady gains in the North Dakota dry bean industry during the 1980s propelled it into the lead for the first time in 1991. The top dry bean producing states in 2014 were:

| | STATE | % MT |
|----|--------------|------|
| 1. | North Dakota | 31% |
| 2. | Michigan | 15% |
| 3. | Nebraska | 13% |
| 4. | Idaho | 9% |
| 5. | Minnesota | 9% |
| 6. | Washington | 7% |
| 7. | California | 4% |
| 8. | Wyoming | 3% |

NORTH DAKOTA is the leading US producer of both pinto beans and navy beans. Dry beans are grown all over the state, with the majority of the crop is produced in the fertile Red River Valley.

MICHIGAN, famous for its navy beans, is the nation's leading black bean producer and also raises a wide range of other bean classes such as cranberry, kidney, small red, and pinto beans.

MINNESOTA is the leading US producer of dark red kidney beans, grown mostly under irrigation, and is also a large producer of dry land navy and pinto beans.

NEBRASKA produces over 85% of the US's great northern beans, and is also a leading pinto bean producer. 97 percent of the state's dry bean acreage is irrigated.

IDAHO is the nation's largest producer of certified dry bean seed and is a leading US producer of garbanzo, small red, pink and pinto beans.

WASHINGTON is the leading producer of garbanzo beans in the US.

CALIFORNIA'S climate allows it to grow most types of dry beans, predominantly under irrigation. However, four bean classes account for 82 percent of output: blackeye beans, baby lima, large lima and garbanzo beans

WYOMING is a leading producer of bright, packaging-quality US pinto beans.
